The little girl died very suddenly at midnight last night. She was taken down with her life had been despaired of for several

The woman was respectably dressed and told the police that she was Mary West, twenty-three years old, living in Tarrytown. She was taken to the Chambers Street Hospital.

To the ambulance surgeon she admitted that she had drank a little lager beer. She said that she thought she was crossing the street when she fell into the river.

evening. When he returned at a late hour he found a man quietly engaged in rummaging his apartments.

He called in Patrolman Rorke, of the Third Precinct, and together they entered the room where the burg ar was at work.

As soon as the latter saw the officer he made a dash for the door, but was prevented from escaping by Mr. Berger.

A rough-and-tumble fight for supremacy took place, during which the burglar's head was severely cut by the officer's club. He was finally locked up and gave his name as Peter Beycost. In the wife's application for alimony, during the pendency of the action, she charged her husband with committing a number of assaults on her.

This claim was contested by Howe & Hummell, Justoe Murray's attorneys who argued that the parties lived happily together until the advent of Mrs. Murray's mother, who brought discord into the household.

Judge Barrett to-day refused to grant alimony to the wife, saying that the action brought by her was ill-advised and that Mrs. Murray's mother seemed to have been the cause of her daughter's troubles.

Why Hhe Rode on the Sunny Side.

[From the Chicago Journal.]
I see a great many women nowadays with reddish brown hair where their eyes and complexions indicate that it should be black, or with blonde hair where it should naturally be red. Of course, I know and everybody knows that they have been doing something to it—washing it in some strong solution of drugs or chaungane and drying it out in the sun. The knowledge of this has aded me in unraveiling a mystery of street-car travel which I might not otherwise be able to explain. It is the fact that I see many ladies preferring to ride on the sunny side of the oar to the shady side. The sunny side fully exposes the back coils of their hair to the sun and adds the aforesaid bloaching process. The dear creatures are very cute about it, too. I saw a reddish haired lady and gentleman, evinently her busband, enter a Wabash avenue car only this week, and he boiled right for the side protected from the sun. She on the contrary, selected a particularly sunny spot opposite and seated herself. "Why don't you come over here out of the son ?" inquired he, bluntly. "I want to sit here," replied sae, mildly bot irmly. Seeing he might as well yield, he crossed over and sat down by her, and heard him whisper: "I can't see why you want to sit here in this scorching sun." And she whispered in return: "It helps bleach my hair." dish brown hair where their eyes and complexions Fire in the basement of the three-story brick dwelling-house 86 Union street, occupied by Cain-arine Meney as a grocery, caused a damage of $1,200 this morning.
